HONGKONG, SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 10, 1892

As it is intended, we believe, to reconsider in the course of next Legislative

Session the question of public gembling and its prevention, it will not be out of place at the present moment to call attention to one phase of the subject from which a very instructive lesson may be learned. The number of cases of financial embarrassment which resulted from the gambling mania that took so strong a hold of the colony a few years ago gave rise to what might be called a public feeling of virtuous abhorrence of gambling in all its forms. That the feeling would be permanent was too much to expect, and indeed it was not long before convincing indications of its transitory nature were given. As to the particular phase of that public opinion is strongly averse to UNION CHURCH, Kennedy Road.—Min- it, and this, curiously enough, is a inter Rev. G. H. In the general denunciation of gambling which 7.30 A.M.; and on the 4th, at the Evening arose, when the colony; had sufficiently realised how near it had come for a large share of opprobnum. They ST. JOSEPH'S CHURCH, Carden Road .- | were regarded as offering peculiar temp-For SINGAPORE, PENANG & CAL- 9 A.M. Mass and Sermon, 5.30 r.m. Even- tations, and so dangerous were they considered that the Government knowof Kwangtung to have the Kowlcon City po-tez establishments closed. The Vicercy agreed to have them shut up at once. What followed is well known and affords a striking flustration of the nowerlessness of so-called law in China when it touches the squeezes to which officials consider themselves entitled. The Viceroy's mandate was formally carried out. The gambling houses were closed-and opened again. The per-centage of the profits from the houses which went into the pockets of the local mandarin represented nearly the whole of that worthy's income, and as there was no other source of revenue opened to him to make up the deficiency the gambling houses simply could not be kept shut. They are now carrying. on their business in quite as public a way as before, and if they are not quite so floorishing as they were two or three years ago, it is not because their operations are hampered in any way but merely because money is less plentiful now than it was then.

> the removal of a species of temptation. which certain persons of weak or diseased minds appeared to find it impossible to resist, have proved utterly fatile. But if the case of Kowloon City can be taken as an illustration of the inefficacy of the Chinese law against public gambling when that law interferes with the squeezing privileges of officials, we have, on the other hand, an example even nearer our own doors of how the law can be put in force when IN the Manufacture of these Waters the the Chinese authorities decide that it is purest ingredients only are used, and absolutely necessary to do so. The example referred to will be found in the Chinese village of Sam-sui-po, which is throughout. The Water used is subjected close to the frontier line. At the time the Viceroy of Kwangtung was moexaminations and periodically to searching | morialised with regard to the Kowloon that there were public gambling houses in Sam-sui-po, but their attractiveness FOR COAST PORTS .- Waters are for Hongkongites was not supposed to Prices, and the full amount allowed for dangerous. Their proximity to British territory, however, seems to have made them less amenable to the squeezing power of the officials than the Kowlcon establishments. Chiefly on this account, and partly, perhaps, because the amount of the squeeze after all was hardly worth the bother it entailed, it was decided to close these gambling unquestioned right of an official to aug-PRUIT SYRUPS: - LEMON, LIME ment his income by shutting his eyes to infringements of the law could not be touched with impunity. The amount of the squeeze of which he was deprived, whatever it was, must be made good in another way, and compensation for loss of income had to be given. This, we are assured on good authority, is what has been done in the case of the Samsui-po gambling houses, and it explains fully why the Kowloon bells are still MONTSERRAT LIME JUICE open in spite of the undertaking on the part of the Viceroy that they should be closed. The compensation in the latter case would mean a very substantial sum, and the Kowloon houses apparently give the authorities to trouble. The idea that they ought to be shut up merely to oblige the Hongkong Government must have struck the Chinese official mind as something comically absurd, and when the formal order for Full Particulars and Prices on applicatheir closure was issued it was only another instance of Chinese officialdom complacently hood winking the foreigner by pretending to do what it had not the slightest intention of doing.

Thus it is clear that the well-meant

Indeed a multitude of use in England.

Were we desirous to forecast the future of English, we should have to pass on from Americanisms and Indianisms or Anglo-Indianisms to Colonialisms. Mr John S. Farmer, in his 'Slang and its Analogues,' has given many poculiar expressions in common use among Australian coloniats. Australia is now contributing to the 'imperial literature. The reader of current literature is brought face to face with the Australian variant as well as others. In Australia there is nothing supercilious about those who are 'stuckup;' there the phrase is suggestive of 'bushrangers,' upcountry, and scrub. Now chum is the griffin' of Angle-India and the 'tenderfoot' of the Rockies, just as 'guich' is the 'hullah' or the 'canyon,' There is surely a wealth of metaphor in the boomerang of the Black-fellow,' it has been remarked, and something poetic in the 'Never-never land where Leichhardt and so many others have met their fate. The Melbourne 'larrikin 'is the Bowery-boy' of New York, find that some one in Cape Colony is about never yet been done for Australian English and if the promised dictionary be thorough of its kind, it cannot fail to be interesting. Our friend the sverage reader is already familiar with "kloof" and 'kopje,' drift,' and 'spruit, 'spoor' and 'trek,' kreal' and 'veldt,' as well as the mystery of 'inspanning' when 'slaager' is to be formed and of 'outspanning' when it is to be broken up. President Kruger recently announced that he had 'damped the trek into Mashonaland, and it was understood that he had put a damper upon the intended movements of filibustering Boers. He had, in reality, 'done the trick, yet the English phrase might at times mean something very different from that of the Boer. Provincialism in England and cosmopolitanism starting in some of her outer possessions have done much to change the English spoken language, and much that is now written between inverted commas, will, in time, be freed from this prison. Already, the 'quoted' mark is omitted in many cases where it was used a couple of decades ago. History will repost itself, and whenever English comes to be the universal language, it will certainly be changed, in many ways, from any single
